A definition

“A fair translation of due diligence is an investigation and research into and examination of the background and financial condition, business operations and contractual obligations of a (person or) company. It is done to establish a complete, accurate and reliable vision of the subject so that realistic, fact-based decisions can be made by another entity considering investment, business relationship, acquisition or litigation.”

Head vs Heart decision

3 Great Outcomes

1

- It confirms everything you thought you knew already

2

- It tells you stuff you didn't know, and you can plan appropriately and make a success of the conversion

3

- It tells you stuff you didn't know, and you avoid risking sustainability in your organization, and impacting on the lives of those that rely on you
